A telegram from the Associated Press correspondent at Mukden filed at 9:27 on the evening of September 1st, states that the train service between Mukden and Liao Yang has been interrupted, but the dispatch does not mention whether telegraphic communications

Kuroki's Attempts to Cross River.

According to a dispatch from Liao Yang, General Kuroki made his first attempt to cross the Taitse River late in the evening under cover of a heavy bombardment of the extreme Russian left. The Japanese artillery, which had been firing uninterruptedly for fourteen iours that day, ceased about 9 o'clock and then suddenly reopened about II o'clock to conceal Kuroki's preparations for crossing the These preparations necessitated the establishment of a pontoon bridge, as the river was not fordable lower than Sakankwantun the pontoons must have been floated down the stream.

The efforts of the Japanese to cross the river on August 30th vere not successful and General Kuroki, therefore, ordered a portion army to ford it at Sairkankwantun. General Kuropatkin was unable to prevent the passage of the river, owing to the distance from Liao Yang, about twenty miles, but for the same reason, the Japanese were unable to bring the forces which gained the right bank immediately into action.

Kuropatkin heard of the passage of the Taitse at Sakankankwantun after 6 o'clock on the evening of August 31st, and immediately gave orders for his men to fall back on the outer positions. This move is explained by the desire to collect a strong force with which to repel a flanking movement from the northeast.

The Japanese repeated the attempt to throw pontoons across the Taitse, near Liao Yang during the night of August 31st, again under cover of a bombardment, and this attempt is believed to have been successful. Severe fighting may therefore be expected immediately

The action of the Japanese commander in throwing a force across the river in the face of a strong enemy is considered to be extremely rash, and the position of this force, isolated from the main Japanese army by a deep river, may easily become desperate.

A correspondent of the Associated Press at Vladivostok telegraphs that the Japanese are relying on the aid of the gunboat flotilla for future operation against Liao Yank and Mukden. The gunboats, the correspondent says, have not yet materialized, but in any case they would be in no position to render aid to a force on the right bank in time of need because they would be unable to run the gauntlet of the forts at Liao Yang. The strongest forts are situated on the right bank, where the Russian army is now concentrated. Most Terrific Fight the World Has Ever Known.

The fighting at Liao Yang has beaten all records for the desperate valor of the assailants and the invincible stubbornness of the defenders. The whole history of warfare tells of no such bombardments, no such carnage and no such persistency. Day after day the fight has been resumed at daybreak and kept up with hardly a moment's intermission until after nightfall.

ar-scarred veterans scarce believe the stories which come from the seat of war and declare that it is beyond human endurance for an army to fight without respite for a whole week, each day of which has exceeded its predecessor in intensity of struggle and carnival of

Day after day the thousands of dead bestrewing the battlefield have to be removed. The Japanese have invented new methods to incinerate the heaps of dead, comrades removing the ashes of the honors of burial in Japan. The wounded present a most serious problem. as they tax the transport capacity on both sides to the uttermost.

The most difficult problem, however, is the bringing up of supplies of food and ammunition to every point of the fighting line which extends from ten to twenty miles.

Never has such a bombardment been known. An eye witness of the battle of Vafangow told the Associated Press correspondent that many officers suffered nervous prostration, owing to the terrible roar of the artillery, and one military attache had to be invalided home for the same reason. Yet the artillery fire at Vafangow was far inferior in intensity to that at Liao Yang. around the staff offices shouting. "Banzall" The details of to-day's fighting are scanty. It is only known that at dawn to-day General Oku's army was hurled against the Russian right center on the southern line, and that the Russians were forced to abandon their line and positions and refreat. Their pursuit is now in progress. The result of this pursuit and the result of the flerce battle waged on the eastern line, where General Kuroki is assailing the force, which has long screened Liao Yang, together with the abandonment of the Russian right center on the southern line, exposes the Russian left. But here the Russian force is so heavy that it may possibly be able to protect and extricate itself.

The question of the occupation of Liao Yang by the Japanese is in doubt. The official dispatches do not make mention of such occupation, but it is assumed that the Russians are withdrawing through Liao Yang, and that the Japanese possibly occupied it late to-day. To-night no estimates are obtainable of the losses on either side, Field Marshal Oyama describes his losses in the morning assault as heavy. The arily success of the attack was somewhat unexpected on account of the strength of the Russians and the nature of the Russian defenses. It is confidently believed that Field Marshal Oyama strength of the Russians and the nature of the Russian defenses. It is confidently believed that Field Marshal Gyama will press the pursuit with desperate vigor and infliet on General Kuropatkin the most crushing blow possible. It is believed that his trophies will prove valuable. It is the opinion here that the Russians were not able to carry many guns with them, and that they were forced to abandon or destroy vast quantities of slores.

Story of Fight.

7 P. M.—At daybreak to-day the Japanese, army on the left delivered a fierce and successful assault aguinst the heights to the west of Hsin Lin Tun and the high ground to the west of Shou Shan Pao. It pierced the Russian lines, and probably later forced the retirement of the Russian troops from their position on the right and center. Marquis Oyama telegraphs that his losses in these assaults were heavy.

General Kuroki's casualties from August 24th to August 28th amounted to 2,255 men. The other casualties have not been reported.

way completed its tenth year.

One decade is a short period in the history of a corporation or a country, but many important things may occur in that brief span.

In the case of the Southern, the system has, grown remarkably. It has jumped from 4.140 miles to 7.164 miles.

Its gross carnings have increased from 125 600 000 000

$17,000,000 to $45,000,000.

Its common stock has risen from below 10 to above 45, although at present it is about 27.

Its prefetred has advanced from below 20 to 22 and has been to 98.

For four or five years it did not pay a dividend on prefetred. Then it began by paying one per cent, and for the last two years has paid five per cent, annually on the prefetred. 11s preferred has advanced from below 20 to 92 and has been to 98.

For four or five years it did not pay a dividend on preferred. Then it began by paying one per cent, and for the last two years has paid five per cent, annually on the preferred.

Millons of dollars have been spent on roadbed, bridges, rails, shops, terminals and equipment. The road has been practically rebuilt, and it is now a high-class property in every respect.

The Southern has advertised the South all over the globe, and it has brought in millions for investment in farms and manufacturing industries.

The company's service has been wonderfully improved, and is now equal to any in the land. The Southern has any in the land. The Southern has any in the land. The Southern has large the railroad and three miles southers any in the land. The Southern has ral hundred thousand shots were fired between surrise and sunset. General Kuropatkin's order to fall back on the fortifications, was probably due to the receipt of information that the Japanese had succeeded in crossing the Taitse River, northeast of Liao Yang, although General Rennenkampff's and Mandarileff's divisions had been especially placed in position in this direction to checkmate such a move. The Japanese crossed at a point called Sakankanwantum, twenty miles east and somewhat above Liao Yang and marched in force directly westward with the evident object of cuiting the Russian line of communication with Mukden. Their exact strength was not established, but a division was made out.

Impaled on Stakes.

Impaled on Stakes.

As soon as the Japanese found that the Russians were retiring from their outer positions southward, they resumed the attack, although it was then quite dark. Thus pressed, the Russians arrested their movement to the rear and again faced the Japanese. With the view of eventful retirement from their outer positions, the Russians had dug a large number of pits, with stakes concealed in their bottoms. The pits were artfully concealed among the high Chinese corn. When the Japanese charged after the Russians, they fell into the pits in hundreds and were engulfed and impaled on the stakes and their lines were thrown into confusion. When the Russians faced about and returned to their old positions, they found these death traps filled with dead and dying. Impaled on Stakes.

General Sakharoff, in reporting the battle, says the Japanese suffered enormous losses, much larger than those of the Russians, who also lost heavily. No statement is made in regard to the losses. General Stakelberg, who is among the wounded, still retains command of his army corps, although he is no longer in chief command of the southern army which has since been consolidated under General Zaroubieff. Stakelberg's injury is slight and he did not leave the field. General Marozovsky, who was also wounded, commanded the artillery brigade. He distinguished himself during the suppression of the Boxer troubles in China. His wound is severe.

General Sakharoff, in a dispatch to the general staff, dated to-day, says of yesterday's fighting:

The Russians maintained all their positions, Gen. Kondratenko's detachment specially distinguishing litself. During the last four hours of the day the Japanese fired an immense number of projectiles and the Russian positions were searched by the Japanese schrappel. The Russians maintained a stubborn defence the whole day. Our troops all day long were exposed to a half of schrappel, but defended the positions fortusted to them with desperate bravery. After preparing for the assult with artillery, the Japanese repeatedly attacked our positions. Some of our advanced fortifications passed into their hands, after a, stubborn defense. They were, low-over, each time recaptured by us at the point of the bayonet. The Japanese left a number of dead. After each bayonet engagement our troops found time to dig pits in the fields of Chinese corn, in front of some of our positions. These, in some cases, were completely filled with Japanese corpses. The cenny's losses must have been even approximately computed, but they are also large. A considerable number of Japanese arms fell into our hands. The night passed quintly. Up to 8 o'clock this morning there has been no movement on either side. Gen. Kurok is constructing a pontoon bridge at a ford crossing the Taltse river."
